In purity of motive and genuine unselfishness, in all that makes up the true man, and in unblemished integrity, the deceased was a model for all who wish to walk the rugged paths of life with a soul uncontaminated by its corrupting currents.

How uncertain is life and how certain is death when manhood in its prime is thus sudblighted! It is only when one, near and dear, the Federal and State Governments, upon every from our immediate circle of friends and ac-equestion except that of collecting and disburs quaintances, is suddenly summoned to meet the ling revenue. It would reduce the Federal Govinevitable doom of all, that we fully realize the dread uncertainty of life's tenure. We daily see the hearse and its attendant trainmoving in mournful measure to the grave, and think but for a moment of the melancholy spectacle, because the funeral car bears a stranger to the tomb. But that stranger corpse is not to all a stranger. Heart-ties, as strong and capacity. If the former is true, that is, the tenacious as eternity itself, have been rudely suspped asunder. Tears, as true and melting as ever bedew the good man's bier have fallen over them, and cannot distribute them. Each affliction as sacred and holy, whenever we witness its sincere outpourings. AN OLD CITIZEN AND GOOD MAN GONE. We were pained yesterday to hear of the death of one of our oldest and most respected citizens, Mr. LITTLETON HENDERSON, who departed this life last Sunday evening. Mr. HENDERSON'S citizenship in Memphis dates back to its earliest settlement. He has spent a long life in our midst, and has lived the life of an upright mun and exemplary Christian. He was regarded as the father of the First Presbyterian Church in this city, whose members feel that a true and faithful shepherd of their flock has been cut down. Many there are who will cherish his memory and emulate his exemplary life. But we profess not to be his eulogist. For a befitting tribute to his life and character, we yield to other heads and other hands more competent to fulfil this grateful

The Democracy in most of the counties in West Tennessee, we presume, have appointed delegates to the State Convention, which aspurpose now is merely to remind our friends. and to urge upon them the importance of attending. It is desirable that the Convention be full, and that all parts of the State be well represented. Harmony and unity of action and sentiment will thus be the better preserved. Let these prevail in our ranks, and victory is sure to perch upon our standard.
